

MR. ALBERT E. HUNT, WRITER, IS DEAD

Valued Member of the Herald Staff in Harness Through Failing Health to the Last.

Mr. Albert E. Hunt, one of the best known newspaper men in this part of the country, died yesterday morning at his home, No. 600 West 169th street. He was forty-one years old and married. For twenty-five years he had been active in the field of journalism as a reporter and special writer, his assignments including stories of international importance. His best work was done as a member of the staff of the HERALD, with which organization he had been connected for the last eight years.

A little more than two years ago his health began to fail, and while he was forced to relinquish active work he could not be persuaded to give up entirely. His power as a descriptive writer remained with him to the end and a few months ago, with the shadow of death resting on him, he contributed a story to these columns which attracted widespread attention among newspaper men and the public generally. It was the story of the death of a Jewish landlord who had gone to view the body of a man he had dissevered a few days before, and was regarded as one of the best pieces of news writing in years. Mr. Hunt died in harness. He worked until midnight Thursday and yesterday morning, just as the day was breaking, he was called to his final reward.

Mr. Hunt began his newspaper work when he was thirteen years old as a member of the staff of the Philadelphia Public Ledger. He went with the Associated Press in 1888 and covered many important stories for that organization, his first big assignment being the trial of H. H. Holmes, the notorious wife murderer of Chicago. While in the Associated Press service he reported the trial of the assassin of President McKinley and the trial of the assassin, and represented the Philadelphia North American at the coronation of the late King Edward VII. He was an able writer, a loyal friend, and a man of the most generous impulses, and his passing will be mourned by a wide circle of acquaintances throughout the country. Funeral services will be held Sunday morning at ten o'clock.

SISTER, 95, BROTHER, 90, DIE.

Miss Phoebe H. Burgess and Mr. R. L. Burgess William Penn Descendants.

TRIDENT, N. J., Friday.—Only four hours separated the deaths of Miss Phoebe H. Burgess, aged ninety-five, and her brother, Mr. Robert L. Burgess, who was ninety years old. The latter died of pneumonia early yesterday afternoon and his sister expired later of the infirmities of age.

They lived at Ballington, Pa., and were the last members of a family of seven children, all of whom lived past the three score and ten mark, and none of whom married. They were direct descendants of William Penn.

MRS. LAURA CURTIS BULLARD.
Mrs. Laura Curtis Bullard, widow of Mr. Enoch Patterson Bullard, who was president of the Anglo-American Drug Company, died yesterday from a complication of diseases at her home, No. 2 West Eighteenth street. Mrs. Bullard was eighty years old and a charter member of the Sorosis Club.

OBITUARY.

MRS. NATALIE MANNES.
Mrs. Natalie Mannes, wife of Mr. Henry Mannes, president of the Grand Rapids Furniture Company, died yesterday from pneumonia at her home, No. 208 West Ninety-second street. Mrs. Mannes was the mother of Mr. David Mannes, a violinist of prominence, who will play several of his mother's favorite selections at the funeral service. Mrs. Mannes was eighty-one years old. She was married to Mr. Mannes in Berlin and came to this country in 1890. She was active in Jewish charities.

Mrs. Sarah Stiner Freidenberg, wife of Mr. Isaac Freidenberg, died on Thursday after a lingering illness at her home, No. 300 West 109th street. Mrs. Freidenberg was born in Kingston, Jamaica, and was a daughter of the late Mr. Jacob Stiner, who was the proprietor of the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company. She was married in 1884 to Mr. Freidenberg, who was then a cotton merchant in the South, but who later became associated with his father-in-law in the tea business. Mrs. Freidenberg is survived by her husband, two daughters and five sons, who are prominent in mercantile circles.

Mr. Max J. Jacoby, a well known tobacco dealer, died yesterday of heart disease at his home, No. 181 East 16th street. Mr. Jacoby was born in New York city in 1858. He was a prominent member of the Manhattan Chess Club and was recognized as one of the best chess players in the city.

LEAPED FROM HIGH WINDOW.
Inventor, Who Suffered from Nervousness, Found Dead Between Hospital and Police Station.

Charles H. Moore, a retired plumber and inventor, who lived with his wife at No. 608 Tenth avenue, Brooklyn, jumped from a fourth story window of the Neurological Hospital, in East Sixty-seventh street, Manhattan, yesterday and was killed.

Mr. Moore, who was sixty-three years old, was in receipt of a royalty of about $100 a month from one of his patents. He had been an invalid for two years and suffered much from nervousness. Recently he had been living at Lakewood, N. J., but went to the hospital for treatment early this week.

He leaped from the window yesterday morning during the absence of his nurse, and was found dead in the area between the hospital and the East Sixty-seventh street police station.

THIRD CREPE KNOT
ON THE SAME DOOR

Automobile Brings Quick Death to the Last Breadwinner of a Struggling Family.

On the door of No. 129 Thompson street last night was a knot of crepe, while in the front of the two rooms was a long black box. Twice before in the last two weeks there have been long black boxes in this front room and knots of crepe on the door. In the back room last night were three children, the eldest fifteen, weeping.

In the neighborhood women and men were discussing in whispers the death of Rose Sileo, the last of the workers in the Sileo family and the mother of the three children. Maria Sileo, a niece of the dead woman, was stricken with pneumonia in the cold snap two weeks ago and died in three days. Then was the first box and the first knot of crepe on the door, and there was only one worker and bread winner left in the family.

The husband, Giuseppe Sileo, who had lingered with consumption, died next, and there was another box and knot of crepe. Last night the mother was coming home from work when an automobile struck her at the corner of Sullivan and Houston streets and she died in the hospital.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Friday.—Official visits were exchanged today between Phillips Lee Goldsborough, the newly inaugurated Governor of Maryland, and Captain J. H. Gibbons, superintendent of the Naval Academy.

The naval party was received by Governor Goldsborough, Adjutant General Henry M. Warfield, Assistant Adjutant General Henry M. Hutton and A. Eugene De Rees, secretary to the Governor. Governor Goldsborough, with the same officials, returned the call of Captain Gibbons.

MRS. MORSE NOW AT HUSBAND'S SIDE

Banker's Condition Improves Following Release, but He Is Still Too Ill To Be Moved.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE HERALD.]
ATLANTA, Ga., Friday.—Mrs. Charles W. Morse arrived here today, and went immediately to Fort McPherson to join her husband, released yesterday from imprisonment by President Taft.

Reports from Fort McPherson are that Mr. Morse has improved slightly following the news of his release and the knowledge that he was not to die a prisoner. There are those who now believe he will at least partially recover. He is still too ill to be moved.

With the coming of Mrs. Morse it has been arranged to hold a conference of Mr. Morse's friends tomorrow and to decide what shall be done to hasten his improvement. It may be decided to keep him here until he can gain strength to be moved, but it is certain that as soon as he is able to make the journey he will be taken to a more favorable climate, probably Florida.

A newspaper man saw Mr. Morse today for the first time since he entered the prison. He was stretched upon his cot, his face was wan and wasted, and he had lost the rotundity so familiar in his pictures.

It was learned today that President Taft had actually signed a release for Mr. Morse Christmas Eve, and turned it over to Attorney General Wickersham. The next day, it is said, the President instructed the Attorney General to return the release.

YOUNG GIRL THROWS ACID.

Man She Aimed at Escapes, but Two Bystanders Are Deluged with Burning Fluid.

Accused of having thrown vitriol in a saloon at No. 232 Monroe street, Hoboken, last night, Margaret Gleeson, fifteen years old, of No. 602 Newark street, Hoboken, was taken a prisoner to St. Mary's Hospital. Joseph Hallock, formerly a freeman, who lives at No. 1,011 Park avenue, Hoboken, was convicted last spring on an accusation made by the girl and was sentenced to the State Prison at Trenton for three years. The Court of Pardons released him at Christmas.

Hallock went to the Monroe street saloon last night. The girl followed him. Hallock dodged as a large quantity of acid swept through the air, but Marco Dieovich, a bartender, and Michael Mellado, were showered with the burning fluid. The former may lose the sight of his right eye.

AUTOMOBILE KILLS BOY; SPEEDS AWAY

Body, Caught in Hood, Is Carried a Block Before It Is Dislodged and Hurled to Street.

Struck by an automobile in which were two men, whose identity the police are seeking to learn, Patrick Fay, ten years old, of No. 12 West End avenue, was killed in front of his home at six o'clock last night. The body, after being struck, rebounded upon the hood of the car, smashed the windshield, and it was only by zigzagging the automobile along the avenue that it was dislodged and fell into the street a block away from the scene of the accident. The automobile then disappeared northward at a speed approximating sixty miles an hour.

The dead boy had been for several days preparing for his communion. He was attached to the parochial school of the Paulist Fathers at Fifty-ninth street and Columbus avenue, and had spent the afternoon in studying his catechism. At half-past five o'clock he started out with the permission of his parents to play in the street with Thomas Larenz, twelve years old, and several other companions.

As the boys passed into the street, there loomed up in the distance an automobile. According to young Larenz, the machine crept upon the crowd of boys without a sound. Larenz first saw it when it was twenty feet away, and as he jumped out of its path, he yelled to young Fay to watch out. The warning came too late, however, and the boy was struck before he was aware of its peril.

Policeman John Green, of the West Sixty-eighth street station, was watching down the avenue when he saw the machine zigzagging along the highway. Presently, the body of the boy was dislodged and fell into the street. The policeman cried out to the man in the machine to halt, but they increased the speed of the car and soon were lost to view in the darkness. Policeman Green called an ambulance and Dr. Barrett, of Fowler Hospital, upon examination, said the boy's neck was broken and nearly every bone in his body shattered.

The body of the boy was carried into the home of his parents by Matthew Barry, his aged grandfather. The number of the car was not obtained, but being an olive green touring car, the police are hopeful of finding its owners.

FARMER HOLDS UP RAILROAD.

Goes to Sleep in Wagon and Disarranges the Schedule of New Haven Company.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE HERALD.]
DANBURY, Conn., Friday.—Drowsing in his wagon, as he started home from this city last night, Albert Hunt, a Ridgefield farmer, mistook the right of way of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad for the main highway to Ridgefield. Before he awoke to his mistake he had held up half a dozen trains on their way to and from South Norwalk and New York, including the Pittsfield express, and completely disarranged the division schedule. The sleepy farmer bumped over switches and culverts for nearly a mile, until his horses became entangled between the ties of a trestle spanning the Still River. The services of a locomotive and wrecking crew were required to lift the animals and wagon.

URGES FIRE TOWERS FOR BIG BUILDINGS

Rudolph P. Miller Says Fire Escapes Are Dangerous in Winter and Often Useless.

Fire escapes on most big buildings in New York are of little value in emergencies and should be replaced by "fire towers," according to Rudolph P. Miller, Superintendent of Buildings in Manhattan. He has made a report to the New York State Factory Investigating Commission recommending many changes in the laws relating to fire prevention and the public safety.

Mr. Miller states that most persons are afraid of fire escapes and seek them only as a last resort. It is impossible for many to make haste on a fire escape, and in the winter months the landings and ladders are usually covered with snow and ice and are dangerous. The fire escapes often are rendered useless, Mr. Miller states, because of smoke and flames issuing from windows.

"Fire towers should be built in place of the antiquated fire escapes," the report states. "These towers should be protected by fire walls and provided with broad, easy stairs and doors so built that every occupant of a building may leave his work at the first alarm and get out of a building in a few moments."

Disagreeing with Commissioner Joseph Johnson, Mr. Miller urges that jurisdiction over exits be given to the Bureau of Buildings instead of the Fire Department. It is impractical, the Building Superintendent believes, to have divided responsibility.

The State Commission is asked to frame a law which will give the local officials authority to close any factory or loft building in which protection from fire is regarded as inadequate. Request is made also for a provision which will limit the number of persons permitted to occupy buildings in proportion to the floor space used and the size of the fire exits.

Senator Robert F. Wagner is chairman of the commission which has been at work since last spring studying conditions in factories through the State.

BOARD HEARS STRIKERS.

Women and Girls Tell of Long Work Hours in Laundries.

Continuing the investigation to learn the causes of the strike of workers in the laundries, the committee from the State Board of Mediation, in session yesterday in City Hall, heard testimony by employees and employers. The women and girls told of working from ten to fourteen hours daily for wages ranging from $5 to $10 a week. A few told of making from $14 to $19 a week. The employers said they paid as high wages as the business justified.

Dog Guards Master's Frozen Body.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE HERALD.]

STREATOR, Ill., Friday.—After keeping lonely vigil in a corn field for hours in zero weather over the body of his master, a faithful hunting dog barked and attracted the attention of a searching party. Walter Koetz, the dog's owner, is supposed to have fallen on the icy ground and suffered a fracture of the skull and concussion.

Will of Mrs. Edith Crane Power.

The will of Mrs. Edith Crane Power, wife of Tyrone Power and daughter of William H. Crane, was filed for probate in the Surrogate's Court yesterday. Mrs. Power died on January 3. She bequeathed her home, at No. 231 Lincoln road, to her mother, Mrs. Emily H. Crane, and the residue of the estate to her husband.

SEIZED AT HOTEL ON FRAUD CHARGE

Forgery of Pennsylvania Railroad Passes Disclosed by Arraignment of Prisoners.

Behind the arraignment in the Yorkville Court yesterday of two men accused of obtaining mileage books from the Pennsylvania Railroad by means of a forged order is a story of how a policeman from the West Thirtieth street station, while posing as a railroad official, brought about the arrest of the two.

A. Cox, who is employed in the office of the Pennsylvania Railroad at No. 265 Fifth avenue, complained to the police about a month ago that a man had presented an order signed with the name of J. J. Ascher, proprietor of a detective agency in Broadway, near Fortieth street, for six mileage books, valued at $120. Mr. Ascher declared that the order was a forgery.

Policeman Hughes, who was assigned to the case, introduced himself to a man he met near the detective agency as an official of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, and said that he was about to visit the agency in order to obtain strike breakers in preparation for labor troubles that were expected to occur among the employees of the railroad. The man said he was Curt Lindau, of No. 1,021 East Tenth street, Brooklyn.

Lindau and the policeman went to the Hotel Macabrough, where they were joined by a man who said he was Wallace Bentley, of No. 535 West 111th street. Hughes says the men agreed to supply him with strike breakers. As the three left the hotel the policeman told Lindau and Bentley they were under arrest. Later Hughes arrested Harry Taylor, of No. 161 West Thirty-sixth street. He was held as a material witness.
